Anthropology FALL 2023

ANTH 2307 BIOLOGICAL ANTHROPOLOGY*

Biological (or physical) anthropology is the study of human variation and evolution. This course provides the foundation for further study of human variation, evolution, anatomy, and is recommended for anyone with an interest in a career related to human biology, including forensics, medicine, and archaeology. Included within the discipline is the subfield of primatology; anthropologists study non-human primates both for their own sakes and for the insights they provide into the evolution of humans. Three broad topical areas are covered in this course: Genetics, human variation & adaptation; Primate anatomy, behavior, & evolution; and Hominin evolution.

*Required course for BA in Anthropology

UTA CORE CLASS: Life and Physical Sciences

ANTH 1306 INTRODUCTION TO ANTHROPOLOGY

Anthropology is the study of humanity, past and present, and around the world. In this overview of the discipline you will learn about archaeology, biological anthropology, cultural anthropology, and linguistics. Anthropology imparts invaluable core knowledge about human cultural and biological history, lending itself flexibly as a tool to refine your interests and expand the curiosity you bring to higher education. The goal of this course is to build anthropological knowledge you can use for the rest of your life.

This course is intended for non-majors.

ANTH 3330 / AAST 3330 / MAS 3330 CULTURAL DIVERSITY AND IDENTITY

The ways identity is constructed in contemporary societies in an increasingly complex and multicultural world. Ethnic, racial, gender, and class identities. How and when identity is asserted and assigned, and how it can both draw boundaries and forge ties between peoples.

T/TR 12:30 – 1:50 PM Dr. Julie Adkins (jadkins@uta.edu)

ANTH 3349 ANTHROPOLOGY OF GLOBALIZATION

The forces of economic globalization now reach every corner of the world to the point that few societies have been untouched by their impact. This course examines the forces that drive globalization and their repercussions upon local communities around the world. It examines how economic globalization affects the lives of real people in developing and industrialized countries as well as in small-scale societies traditionally studied by anthropologists.

T/TR 9:30 – 10:50 AM Dr. Christian Zlolniski (chrisz@uta.edu)

ANTH 3369 / SOCI 3360.002 MEDICAL ANTHROPOLOGY

This course will offer a general introduction to the field of medical anthropology/medical sociology. Medical anthropologists study the relationships among culture, society, the environment, disease, health, and healing. Specific topics include the cultural construction and organization of medical systems, patients and healers, health and development, global disparities in health and disease, nutritional anthropology, biocultural aspects of disease, bioethical debates, and practical applications of medical anthropology. Instruction is via lecture, reading, video, internet materials and class discussion.

ANTH 3409 / BIOL 3409 PALEOANTHROPOLOGY (with lab)

This course provides a more detailed examination of the fossil evidence for human evolution than does ANTH 2307, the general introductory course for biological anthropology. We begin with a review of evolutionary theory and principles, osteology, and dating techniques, followed by an overview of early primate evolution. The remainder of the course traces the evolution of our taxonomic family, the Hominidae, from its beginnings to "anatomically modern" Homo sapiens. Throughout the course, the relationship between biological and cultural/behavioral evolution will be explored. This course is cross-listed with Biology.

Course limited to 20 seats - enroll early!

ANTH 4406 / BIOL 4406 HUMAN OSTEOLOGY (with lab)

A complete understanding of the human skeleton is essential to the study of any sub-field of biological anthropology, including bioarchaeology, human anatomy, paleoanthropology, forensic anthropology, primatology, and related fields. This class is an intensive introduction to the structure, physiology, and functional morphology of the human skeletal system, with a laboratory emphasis on identification of whole and fragmented bones. Students study the skeleton in the context of muscular, vascular, neurological, and other systems. In addition, students are briefly introduced to bioarchaeological issues, including the analysis of sex, age, and health. This class is also recommended for students planning a career in the health professions.

Course limited to 20 seats – enroll early!

Fulfills Method requirement for BA in Anthropology.

ANTH 3370 ARCHAEOLOGY OF THE PREHISTORIC AEGEAN

Examine the origins, development, and decline of the first two high civilizations in Europe, the Minoans and the Mycenaeans. The course will focus on Late Bronze Age society, economy and religion, the best evidence for which is the architecture and art of palaces and Linear B clay tablets. We conclude with evidence and theories for the collapse of the Mycenaean empire. The historicity of the Trojan War, and archaeological glosses on the "Homeric Question" will also be examined.

M/W 4 – 5:20 PM Dr. Martin Gallagher (Martin.Gallagher@uta.edu)

Special Topics in Courses in Archaeology

ANTH 4358.001 / ART 3302 ART OF ANTIQUITY

Ancient art and architecture of the Mediterranean Basin from the Aegean Bronze Age (3000 BCE) to the Late Roman Empire (4th century CE) with attention to the ritual and political uses of art. M/W 5:30 – 6:50 PM Dr. Leah McCurdy (leah.mccurdy@mavs.uta.edu)

ANTH 4358.002 / ART 3320 ART OF THE ANCIENT AMERICAS

Explores the art, architecture, and archaeology of the Americas from the Paleoindian period through European colonization across North, Central, and South America. Students critically consider the biases of scholarship, colonial legacies, and contemporary perspectives. T/TR 9:30 – 10:50 AM Dr. Trenton Barnes (trenton.barnes@uta.edu)
