

2016-2017 HONORS COLLOQUIA

"Do You Live in a News Bubble?"

Professor Mark Tremayne, Department of Communication

Increasingly, people get their news from social media and partisan outlets. In the first Honors Colloquium of 2017, Dr. Mark Tremayne from the Department of Communication will discuss the implications of this trend, including the role of “fake news” in the modern political environment and possible solutions to the problem of a misinformed public.

Noon

Friday, February 17, 2017
Carolyn A. Barros Reading Room, 100-A College Hall
Pizza and Beverages Provided

n. pl. col·lo·qui·a (-kwē-ə)

1. An informal meeting for the exchange of views.
2. An academic seminar on a broad field of study, usually led by a different lecturer at each meeting.

The Honors Colloquia are a series of informal academic discussions of current research by faculty, staff, and students of the Honors College