

2017-2018 HONORS COLLOQUIA

"Art Therapy for Veterans at the University of Texas at Arlington"

Professor Amanda Alexander,
Department of Art & Art History

How is art used as therapy, and what are the measured effects? Find out at the next Honors Colloquium, when Dr. Amanda Alexander of Art & Art History outlines a major initiative to provide art therapy workshops for the 4,900 veterans currently enrolled at UT Arlington. Dr. Alexander's presentation will include information on the data collected to determine the magnitude of symptom relief and healing for the men and women veterans dealing with service-related trauma or disabilities.

Noon

Friday, December 1, 2017

Carolyn A. Barros Reading Room, 100-A College Hall
Pizza and Beverages Provided

n. pl. col·lo·qui·a (-kwē-ə)

1. An informal meeting for the exchange of views.

2. An academic seminar on a broad field of study, usually led by a different lecturer at each meeting.

The Honors Colloquia are a series of informal academic discussions of current research by faculty, staff, and students of the Honors College.