

2017-2018 HONORS COLLOQUIA

“Service Learning and Clinical Education in Nursing: A Delphi Inquiry”

Professors Denise Cauble and Thomas Dombrowsky (College of Nursing and Health Innovation)

Service learning is increasingly promoted as a high-impact pedagogy that is key to academic as well as civic engagement. But what is the place of service learning in disciplines that already emphasize other forms of experiential learning? Come hear Professors Denise Cauble and Thomas Dombrowsky discuss how they used Delphi Inquiry—a method with military origins—to track and understand professional perceptions of service learning and traditional clinical education in the field of Nursing.

Noon

Friday, March 23, 2018
Carolyn A. Barros Reading Room, 100-A College Hall
Pizza and Beverages Provided

n. pl. col·lo·qui·a (-kwē-ə)

1. An informal meeting for the exchange of views.
2. An academic seminar on a broad field of study, usually led by a different lecturer at each meeting.

The Honors Colloquia are a series of informal academic discussions of current research by faculty, staff, and students of the Honors College.