PBS Releases Digital Series on Dismantling Racism in Mental Health Care!

“Like other healthcare industrial complexes, the mental health field operates around a centre defined by a whiteness of theory and practice. It’s a colonization that has rarely ever been questioned. DECOLONIZING MENTAL HEALTH dismantles the racism that underscores the mental healthcare industry. By focusing its gaze on the transformative work of therapists and individuals of color, it calls for a redressal of the ways in which we define psychiatric illness and health. Through 20 profiles, the digital series discusses what a more responsive mental health care system should look like.

Decolonizing Mental Health is part of a multi-platform initiative from GBH that includes the four-hour “Mysteries of Mental Illness” docuseries on PBS tracing the evolution of the complex topic of mental health from its earliest days to present times.”

Hi Everyone,

How is 2021 almost over?! We have four months to go, and I’m not even finished processing everything that happened in 2020! Time is flying by for me, but when I look back on what I’ve done, I realize most of my time was spent inside my house in front of a screen. I don’t feel bad about this; Staying home means that I care about my community. However, the choices made for the physical health of everyone impact my emotional health. And as the fall semester creeps up on us, I’m realizing I’m about to spend most of my days in the social work building looking at a screen. I spent this summer reconnecting with friends and family after I was vaccinated, but I’ve noticed my technology use is still as high as it was when the pandemic first started. I know that some screen time is necessary, but I’m starting to understand that technology use was just as dangerous to my wellbeing as the isolation.

I came across a study from 2016 that found people in the US spend a little over 10 hours a day consuming media. That’s more than the average person spends asleep! I can only imagine how the average has changed school and many office jobs moved online. You are probably familiar with terms like “Zoom fatigue,” but “technostress” was a concept coined in 1984. Technostress comes from things like checking your phone or email constantly to constantly feel connected. The result of technostress is increased anxiety and irritability as well as physical pain like headaches and insomnia.

So what can we do? Well, I’m not entirely sure, but I am starting to explore new approaches for myself. I came across a Japanese practice called shinrin-yoku, which is roughly translated to “forest bathing.” This practice is born out of the idea that our bodies are programmed to enjoy nature, but technology and city-living reduces that exposure. Because of this, our bodies are living in a foreign space, which contributes to issues with both physical and emotional wellbeing.

What I love about forest bathing is that you can do this both with and without the guidance of a mental health professional. Forest bathing is about connecting with nature through your five senses. Traditionally, you spend about two hours casually walking or sitting in a forest taking everything in. Now, North Texas doesn’t have Japanese forests, but shinrin-yoku experts suggest park trails or even just sitting outside has the same impact. The benefits of forest bathing can include lowered anxiety, lowered blood pressure, increased energy, and improved pain thresholds. Even if you are in an area with a lot of concrete, putting a few plants around your house can bring you closer to nature. You matter enough to spend some time reconnecting with yourself and the world around you.

Next time you are out in nature, try one of these exercises whether it’s sitting by your plant, being out in a park, or diving deep into the woods. Be sure to examine how you feel before and after. Even 10 minutes a day can leave you feeling a little more replenished.

- Take several minutes to look at the leaves on a tree. Allow yourself to focus on the patterns. See what other patterns you can find in nature.
- Find a spot to lay or sit. Focus on your breath and slow down your thoughts. Start to listen in all directions. Close your eyes and continue to listen as you pay more attention to the sounds of nature you didn’t notice before.
- Find a scented candle or essential oil to put in your house. Spend some time relaxing with this scent around you as you focus on your breathing.

HELP NEEDED!

Our group name is "Team Wondrous" and we need help with an evaluation project we are doing for class focused on UTA's Graduate Leadership Program. This survey will help us gauge the effectiveness of the program's outreach effort. The entire process should take less than two minutes and we would greatly appreciate it. The information gathered will be used solely for this research project and all answers will be anonymous and confidential. Last day to complete the survey is August 13rd. We really appreciate your support. Thanks so much.

VACCINE OPPORTUNITIES FOR STUDENTS AND EMPLOYEES

UTA has established partnerships with Texas Health and Walmart to provide access, free of charge, to COVID-19 vaccines for all interested employees and students on campus and throughout the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex. UTA students and employees are strongly encouraged to participate in COVID-19 vaccinations if they are able. Please visit the UTA COVID-19 Vaccination Information and Resources page to access registration links and instructions for both vaccine opportunities.

FACE MASK POLICY

UTA no longer mandates the wearing of masks on campus but continues to strongly encourage and recommend that Mavericks wear masks, particularly when inside campus buildings.

Dean Ryan’s Statement on COVID-19 Health Disparities

If you believe you have contracted COVID19, please type in 'COVID-19 Testing' and your zip code into the Texas Health and Human Services to find a testing location closest to you.

Have you tested positive?

Had close contact with someone with Covid?

1. Complete mandatory reporting form
2. If needed, you can:
   • Ask professors for deadline leniency
   • Contact your USL, Program Director and/or Academic Advisor for additional support and guidance.
