Celebrate Black History Month with Us & Learn About Black Environmentalists

According to Sam Wood with Dogwood Alliance (2022), "historically African Americans have suffered disproportionate impacts from pollution, climate change, and lack of access to green space" (para. 1); thus, racial justice and environmental justice are intertwined. Below are just a few key Black environmentalists who have made great efforts toward maintaining the wellbeing of our planet.

• 1903: Colonel Charles Young became the first African American national park superintendent, and with the help of his fellow Buffalo Soldiers, set the framework for current park management
• 1964: Hattie Carthan regreened her neighborhood in Brooklyn, NY by spreading tree seeds, developed a Garden Youth Corps and produced a Community Farmer's Market in central Brooklyn
• 1982: the Land Loss Prevention Project was developed by the NC Association of Black Lawyers, which Savonala "Savi" Horne is the current Executive Director for

Hello fellow Mavs! My name is Melainie Lauderdale, and I am a 49-year-old single mom to two great kiddos ages 12 and 13. My undergraduate degree is in psychology, and I am in my final two semesters for my Master of Social Work with a concentration in Mental Health and Substance Misuse. I am an older, nontraditional student that has had to learn the ropes and advocate for myself in this new life adventure called graduate school and I could not have done it without the help of my past GSL’s. I utilized my GSL frequently when I needed guidance, and she has been vital to my success. I hope to offer my constituents the same support so please do not hesitate to reach out and ask questions at any time. Good luck with Spring 2023 I look forward to getting to know you all.

YOU MATTER

It's Worth It!

Results after progress is important for self-improvement. Many people may state promises but might not put into the work to attain goals in mind.

People who strive for their intended goals will see results from it. Reaching goals produces great results.

Therefore, many individuals who may or may not know will see the results. Some might be motivated to do the same while others will do the opposite.

Manifestation, visualization, spiritualization, and motivation is key for goal settings. Putting it into action is necessary to see the results. Although it may take time, the results are worth the wait.

It is necessary to keep going although times might get harder and harder.

However, we get stronger and stronger while going through hardships. Therefore, I say to keep striving until you reach your goals for 2023!

Best Regards,
Andwelah Givens
