SOCIAL JUSTICE SPOTLIGHT

Asian American and Pacific Islander Heritage Month

This month brings recognition to the Asian American and Pacific Islander heritage and culture. We recognize the influence and contributions to the history of the United States.

History

In 1978, Congress passed a joint resolution allowing a week of celebration of Asian and Pacific American heritage. This occurred the week of May 4, 1979. In 1990, it was expanded to a month, which a few years later was assigned to May.

The significance of May is because it celebrates the migration of the first immigrants from Japan to the US on May 7, 1943. It also acknowledges the completion of the transcontinental railway completed on May 10, 1869, by 20,000 Asian immigrants.

Ways To Observe

- Attend exhibits and celebrations
•Read about Polynesian history and the Aloha State
•Take a class in Japanese Washi papermaking
•Learn to make Asian American and Pacific Islanders recipes
•Watch a documentary about the transcontinental railroad. Learn about the working conditions for many Asian Americans.
