REGISTRATION TIMETABLE SPRING 2024

If your GPA is 2.0 and higher:

- If you have 90+ hours you can start registering on 11/08
- If you have 60+ hours you can start registering on 11/10
- If you have 30+ hours you can start registering on 11/13

If your GPA is lower than 2.0 and under academic probation:

- you can start registering on 11/17

Registration is open to all students on 11/20

ADVISING PRIOR TO REGISTRATION

All University Studies (UNIS) students must be advised by a UNIS academic advisor prior to registration each semester.

- Students can check for their advising holds and other holds in the Student Center of MyMav. The advising hold must be released by your academic advisor before you can register.
- Typically, the advising period for the Spring term opens in October, and for the Summer and Fall terms in March.

PICKING CLASSES

Students will be provided with a MAP showing their academic progress and a list of course options (Last section of this page) to be able to pick out classes that match degree requirements. Every University Studies student will have a different MAP depending on their primary and secondary content areas and remaining credits. In your advising meeting you will be instructed on how to use these documents.
REGISTRATION INSTRUCTION

The system will not allow students to enroll into classes/sessions if they do not meet the requirements below:

- Prerequisites (a specific course or test score is needed prior to taking this one)
- Courses only designated for Accelerated Online (AO) or Nursing AO students
  (these courses are reserved for a particular cohort of students in these programs, and are not open to all students)
- Department Consent (The department is reserving seats in this class for particular majors, cohorts, student populations. You may contact the advisor in the department offering the class to ask for permission to enroll. It is at their discretion. The University Studies department cannot provide students with permission to enroll in department restricted classes.)

Follow the registration steps below to identify how to search for classes, view course information such as prerequisites or department restrictions, and add courses to your schedule

Step 1:
- Log in into MYMAV Here
- Click under “Student” and log in.
- Enter your UTA username and password.
Step 2:
- Choose “Manage Classes”
- Choose “Class search and enroll.”
- Pick the term you would like to enroll.
  (For EX: Spring 2024)

Step 3:
- “Search for classes” by typing the subject in the box and hit enter (if you have a specific course in mind type in the course number as well)
- For Example: Hist 1302 will show 13 options available.
Step 4:

- Check course information and requirements
- Each section will have information on seats available, dates offered, locations, and instructors.

Click on each Class # to check requirements for that particular section.

Online classes will say “OFF WEB” rather than posting days and times

There is no comprehensive list of online classes offered each term, so this search is part of your individual subject search.

Click the Enroll button to register.

When you click on “Class#” another box will open to show you a course description, prerequisites, and department restrictions, if any for that specific section. A different section may have different requirements.
FILTERING OPTIONS

If you would like to filter your search, you have the option to do so when you have typed in the subject you are searching and hit enter. Once that is done, you will see filters on the left-hand side of the results page.

LIST OF COURSE OPTIONS

Listed below are course options for Spring 2024 that will apply towards the University Studies degree in either Primary Content, Secondary Content, or Elective areas. This list is only a guide and is not meant to include every course that a University Studies student could potentially take.

Some tips for using this list:

1) This list includes courses with no prerequisites. If you’ve met the prerequisites for courses that are not on this list, and there are no other restrictions on the course, you can choose from those too! For example, maybe you took PSYC 1315 for Social/Behavioral Sciences core. This list only shows Psychology courses that do not have prerequisites. When you look at the schedule there may be other Psychology courses open that have PSYC 1315 as a prerequisite. Since you’ve completed that prerequisite, you can choose from those too.

2) Some courses have multiple sections but a few of those sections are reserved for a specific student population or cohort. If you are not in that population/cohort, you cannot take that section of the class. Pick another section that is open to all students. The closer we get to classes starting the sections open to all students will fill, and only restricted sections will be left on the list so choose early.

3) Departments can decide to restrict courses to certain populations at any time. If you’re searching for a course on this list and it now has a department restriction or new prerequisite, you must abide by that department policy and move on to a course that is open to all students.

4) Some courses are cross listed. This means that the same course is being offered by different departments. You’ll see this indicated by “[subject] or [subject]” on this list. This means that you can register for the course under either subject, but you can only take it once and you are only getting credit for one course.

Classes fill quickly! The earlier you choose your classes and build your schedule the easier it will be to pull things together in a way that helps you stay motivated, plan for courses that are meaningful to you, and have them work well with your timeline, goals, and other obligations! Department permission to register for a course: You must contact the department/school advisor and request permission to enroll in their course. If approved, that department will register you.
